Liked????? or Dislike?????European news roundup (Jun 4) • A new poll shows a dramatic fall in support for growing numbers of European Union institutions. Voters are turning away from the EU, believe its institutions are far too powerful, and think it doesn't work very well. • Far more European countries are in favor of EU reform than not, according to the latest survey by the Pew Research Center, which found that 36 of the EU's nations support the institution. Even more, 52 percent, think the EU would be in a better position if it were stripped down to its core institutions. That's up from 38 percent two years ago. • On Friday, French President Nicolas Sarkozy secured the passage of a deal enabling a French-Italian bank to take over a Belgian lender after winning an endorsement from EU creditors. Next up is Greece, whose efforts to help make its sovereign debt sustainable are being closely watched. • The EU's first batch of European commissioners will be sworn in today after the candidate from Greece was chosen to be the European Commission's first-ever female head. Antonio Tajani is a 28-year-old former prosecutor who has been on the shortlist since the start of the process. The son of an Italian immigrant, Tajani is seen as open-minded, and could help erase what many see as a fault line between east and west. • A protest was held in Brussels on Friday against Goldman Sachs, which is one of the main backers of the European commission. Police evicted dozens of demonstrators who had assembled outside the headquarters of the US investment bank.1. -9: Backdoor Self-Sufficiency for Berserkers Pitbear Owl The D66 Compendium offers in-depth and thorough game-specific arguments for players. Want to make sure that you are mastering the game? Check out the compendium to get some insight on how these arguments break down in different playstyles and what to do about it! The End of the Chain: Berserkers and Self Sufficiency Maybe you are a Mythic Champion who wanders the wilderness, slashing undead flesh with an exotic blade. Maybe you are a party of rogue berserkers that scavenge from you and plunder the goods you find? Or maybe you and your tribe wander to various locations in search of potential sources of coin and goods. Regardless of your interests and playstyle, what playstyle of player will be most successful in your game, and why? How can you leverage that to best upgrade your character or your future in the ways you want? Self Sufficiency If you wish to take actions at your own discretion, or if you wish to forego the assistance of others, you need to be self-sufficient. As such, what options do you have for fulfilling your goals in a remote, sparsely populated area with little to no assistance? The rules for self sufficiency are simple, however, it does come with some caveats. The D66 Compendium also brings everything you need to know in creating you character, enjoy your time and never have to be without the winning character! In this Week's Compendium, your Mass Combat Officer and investigative genius has achieved the feat of acquiring trade goods that are valuable for using in gaming. The next few weeks you will develop the trade goods acquired to best stock and fund your character as you seek and carve out your own little world. Adventurers in Dungeons & Dragons, Pathfinder and D&D Next are able to use their character's skill and favored class abilities to find hidden compartments, break open doors, read items and even peruse escaped animals. Oftentimes, there is a monetary reward involved with the discovery of these loot hidden away. Ancient ruins
