A highly diastereoselective, catalytic, and enantioselective addition of (2-acryloyloxyethyl)benzene to activated aryl acetic acids has been developed. The development of this approach to the mannich bases is based on the use of a novel chiral Lewis acid catalyst, N-methoxy-N-(2-acetyl-1-oxo-1-(2-acetylphenoxy)ethyl)ammonium iodide.St. Clair's Castle St. Clair's Castle () is a castle near the village of Kardjali, in the District of Rhodope, Rize Province, Georgia. It is part of a World Heritage Site, St. Clair's Castle Complex, which encompasses the ruins of a number of forts that were built by the Russians in the early 19th century to protect the approaches to the area from Ottoman Turkish and Albanian attacks. There are some remnants of a thick wall and tower foundation and a large number of buildings in ruins, including the houses of the village villagers, on the territory of the castle. The place is home to the ruins of a 200-year-old church. Bibliography D.P. Sergeev, E.G. Avramidze, St. Clair's Castle Complex, Rize, "History and Topography", 2003, S.V. Glaidze, N.E. Kurmali, D.P. V1.1.0-R2R [deepstatus] full version.[Mortality factors in the forest-exploiting industries]. The author presents the work carried out for the screening of the causes of premature death in the male population engaged in the production and exploitation of wood (forest-exploiting industry), having as a subject material the studied group over the course of 22 years (1962-1984). It is showed that in the category of forestry and exploitation of wood there are certain factors of the social and economic origin which directly influence the mortality and contribute to the premature death of workers, increasing the lethal indices. The Portland Art Museum has received a 4-story donation of more than 100 works from an elusive Chinese art collector, the institution announced Thursday. The Portland Art Museum confirmed the authenticity of 54 of the 100 paintings, a fifth of which had already been published. The remaining 46 paintings are all new and are being catalogued this week. The donor's name has not been disclosed. Portland Art Museum Director Judy Bruce confirmed in an email to The Oregonian/OregonLive that the donation involved "a complex series of transactions" and that the money came from "non-U.S. sources." Five- and six-figure sums in the past were usual for the purchase of Chinese art, and Bruce said the works are "a very important collection in Western art history." The collection is considered among the finest in Chinese modern art, according to the museum. Anticipation has built for what Bruce called a "stunning" donation of more than 100 works, which includes two large-scale installations. In July, the museum hosted a charity auction for the works, which included the collection of a Chinese art dealer who died earlier this year. Details on the donation were released Thursday, nearly a month after Bruce learned that an unnamed collector in China had agreed to donate 100 paintings to the museum. Bruce praised the unknown donor's "commitment to expanding the museum's Chinese art holdings" and announced that the new works "represent an important challenge in the lives of
