Malkil is the first mage from Ancient Egypt. Her life was lost before her eyes. The city of Kairo has become a refugee camp. Building a new life with other refugees, Malkil joined a new command structure. She has just been promoted to Master. One day, when she is working with a few of her allies, something is caught by her eye. She feels pain and a pang of sadness. The opponents are all members of the Black Fire. They have caused havoc in Kairo and other cities in Egypt. Alarms are sounded but before people rush to help the group disappears. Where has she seen these opponents before? Can she handle this new situation? Gallery: Developer Website: TIP: One can install the game by using the Steam Alternative installer. It's a riddle that escapes me. Why can't you set up that magic on Charlie Brown? Why does he have to be Red and me, The Snoopy man, have to be Marco Polo? Kiss that behind me you'll die someday, Right? I wish there was some explanation! Me, I hope they find one soon. Something just feels bizarre about it all but stranger things have happened. Good question though. I can't seem to figure it out and I tend to take care of the disablers first. However, it's hard for me to say what happened yet since I first read the radiopreview but the disabler comment was dropped in the edit and I only got a snippet of the faux crap. I could make my own conclusions (and sure enough, I've made them) but I can't call it. Kinda like how I continued to use Silkroad instead of BB and those looked similar and, well, both have pg-13. And no, this isn't close to anything sexual. I'm cautious in such matters. I'm not someone who begins using MM or even is interested in either until I've had basic human relationships with people. The way I look at it is that I crave certain things - I don't say I think I'm incomplete or boring or that I need to be fixed- just that what I choose to do with myself feels incomplete, boring, incomplete and so on. You'd think I'd be fearless in my personal choices, but I don't. I don't know, don't know.
