We are lucky that we have good jobs so I can work two jobs, leaving me with time to hustle. Sometimes I have a lot of time on my hands, sometimes I don't. Anyways, this post is a testament of how my hustle and time management has allowed me to get an extra $700 (whoop!) in my pocket this month. Getting Money From Vinyl Sales Let's face it. As a hobbyist vinyl collector, you aren't going to make money collecting only a few hundred dollars a month. There is a better option. If you sell more than 300 records in a month or 100+ at a single event, you can make money selling records. The first few months I sold records I found a place to store all my records that I bought or traded with friends or on eBay. It didn't take me that long to store them (they don't take up that much space) and it was a lot easier to open my storefront (Canal Street Record Shop). Over time, I built my collection up and more and more and more people wanted to buy my records. My Business Plan My business plan for a record business includes: Collect 10% of my record sales to the IRS Store my records in my apartment for 3 months then store them in a secure locker for 9 months c6a93da74d
