this was the complete opposite of how snoop would end up releasing his next two albums. after the success of doggystyle, snoop would stay away from releasing albums in traditional, retail stores. he went on to release his next two albums only as a dvd and a 2 cd set. and when he did release an album on a retail store, it didn't sell as well. snoop's next two albums, the doggfather and dogg food, were released in the early 2000s, which was a different time in hip-hop history. in the mid-2000s, hip-hop was still in a place of transition and many of the old guard were trying to establish themselves as rappers that could still take the hip-hop scene to the next level. one of the first releases from the late 2000s was nas' hip hop is dead album, which was a direct response to the lack of hip-hop from the west coast and a shift in the kind of music that people were listening to. the album's single, "gin and juice", peaked at number one on the billboard hot rap tracks chart, and number forty on the billboard hot 100. "gin and juice" also received an ascap music award for most performed song of the year. the hip hop community had been eagerly awaiting the debut of the highly anticipated album by the legendary rap group. but death row was having trouble meeting their delivery schedules. people weren't happy. "it was a great idea. but they weren't doing what they were supposed to be doing. they weren't progressing," said snoop, who spent the last two years working on his album in los angeles. only one of the original recordings from doggystyle made it to the album, a remix of "nuthin but a 'g' thang". (the version on the compilation, death row: the lost sessions vol. 1, is a different remix.)

snoop dogg has often been in the spotlight for his wild lifestyle. the rapper has been married five times, and even after being married to his current wife shante broadus since 2000, he has been caught up in multiple high-profile affairs. in fact, the rapper was also reported to be caught on tape getting down in a hotel room with a woman named brandi. also, according to several sources, death row records co-founder dr. dre allegedly killed himself with a gun around the same time as snoop's hospitalization. tmz also reported that dre was also caught in a hotel with a woman. and now, as we approach 2021, it appears that death row records is finally following the lead of the chronic and doggystyle and turning it into an nft. the last new record released on the death row label was snoop dogg's "no limit, pt. 2" in 2016. the last independent release was "necklace" by 50 cent in 2008. the death row records nfts are available on the sound xyz marketplace. each nft is available to purchase for either $65 or $125, and comes with a digital download of the album. the physical album is available at a future date. the deal with streaming services has made death row a "a lot of trouble" to operate, according to snoop.

he added that he was committed to seeing the label "work. i want to be successful on my own." "i just don't want the road to be crazy. you know what i'm saying? it's too hard to deal with these streaming services. i'm not lying. i don't want to do it. it's a lot of trouble," snoop dogg said. death row's immediate plans are unclear. it has previously sold its assets to the liquor company beam inc. for $60 million. since then, snoop has been a busy touring musician. he's toured with dr. dre, 50 cent, and eminem and released several albums.
