The application is developed by the professional team who previously released the DRM media conversion software 'Apex DVD Video Converter'. When the user first launches the application, the interface of the software is quite similar to the interface of the desktop software. From the software's home page, the user is guided to import the video files to the device through the video editing function. After the video is imported, the user can make some customizations to the video by adding effects, trimming and converting. Though the interface is very similar to that of the desktop software, there is a difference in the user interface. When the user first launches the application, the user needs to navigate through two steps to add videos to the application. The steps involve going to the main page and selecting the video files that are to be added to the device. Once the video files are selected, the user can add them into the software through the import and select section. From the import and select screen, the user needs to select the videos that they want to be imported into the software. Once the videos are imported, the user can continue adding more videos into the software through the import and select screen. There are numerous ways to import
