The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of prophylactic administration of heparin loaded Porcine and Activated Clotting Time (H-PACT) on blood loss and thromboembolic events after total hip or knee arthroplasty. In this prospective multicenter randomized trial, 223 patients were randomized to receive either H-PACT or standard heparinization during total hip or knee arthroplasty. Baseline characteristics were similar between groups. Intra- and postoperative blood loss was significantly less in the H-PACT group (939 mL vs 1293 mL, P = .008). The administration of H-PACT significantly reduced the incidence of deep venous thrombosis (DVT) and pulmonary embolism after total hip arthroplasty (11% vs 34%, P = .038). The reduction in the incidence of DVT was most marked in patients with a history of DVT or pulmonary embolism (0% vs 34%, P = .006). No statistically significant difference was observed in the incidence of wound and deep wound infections or other complications between the
