This latest update to Adobe's After Effects program is another step forward for the software. I recently used it to create a short one minute visualization. It's a quick way of using your photographs to show clients the concept quickly, or just to show off how things work. So a project that I've just completed, and completed in two days, is now available - there's a preview on Vimeo and a link to download a gallery on Vimeo . As photo tools, the new 'Retouch' tools are pretty amazing in Photoshop CC. This whole camera workflow is done so much faster and more accurately than I can do things in Photoshop or Lightroom, which are great programs, but the new tools are really good. The conversion process was very smooth. They took away all the clutter in the various interfaces and made it fast and easy to use. The ""experts"" who develop the operating system convert the application to render as fast as possible. And thus, Photoshop CS4 has resulted in a more responsive, snappy and faster handled application. There's more to Photoshop than meets the eye. Pepsi is back. Photoshop CS4 is back! No more tinkering. Now it is in a format that you can simply enjoy and let it advertise itself. What makes Photoshop CS4 so special is the smoothness of the application. It may seem basic, but that is the truth; without this, the usability is greatly diminished. This is almost related to the fact that Photoshop CS4 takes a lesser space than the previous version. And certainly, no one would want to lose the space benefits in this version when scaling it to other machines.

Adobe Creative Cloud The Gradient Fill tool is located just below the primary menu bar. The Gradient Fill tool creates a gradient fill, which turns a solid color into a gradual blend of colors, so that colors mix subtly rather than abruptly on the image. The Selection tool is found below the coloring tools. By changing the size, shape, or brightness of this selection, you're essentially creating the shapes in your layers that you'd like to manipulate further. Then, at the top of the layers palette, you'll find a little arrow in the top-left corner that shows you which layer you're working on. Hard Light blends smoothly between the two colors, but still creates a distinct color. Soft Light blends subtly and creates a softer look to your image. Lighten blends a lighter, springy color to your image. Darken blends a darker, fall-like color to your image. Dodge blends a bluish color to your image, which softens it, and Burn blends a red-orange color to your image, which brightens it.
